Empire Brewery.

HENNING PETERS, late of the Lion Brewery, is now prepared to supply the trade and families with all kinds of Beer, Ale and Porter.

The Brewery is situated on Spring Ridge, and is built over a well of pure, ever running spring water. This fact enables me to manufacture the very finest brands, equal to any imported Ale, Beer and Porter.

The machinery used is of latest pattern, the ingredients are pure water, malt and hops, and a trial is only necessary to convince that the brands are the finest manufactured in the Province.

All orders for city supply, or for shipment to Island or Mainland points will receive prompt attention and a satisfactory article furnished.

THE ISLES OF GREECE.

A Country that has been much Written about—Famous in Art and Science.

An Unprepossessing People—System in Force for Punishing Criminals.

Written for the VICTORIA TIMES, by CAPT. SIBBALD, R. N.

The Isles of Greece! the Isles of Greece!
Where burning Sappho loved and sung—
Where grew the arts of war and peace—
Where Delos rose, and Phœbus sprung!
Eternal summer gilds them yet,
But all, except their sun, is set.

Greece has been much written about of late, and has been so overrun with tourists, that I may be deemed presumptuous in writing on the subject. Yet, thinking that those who keep their eyes and ears open, notice what others have overlooked, I am tempted to relate some of my experiences when wandering on the mainland or visiting some of the many islands, each of which has a history of its own. I shall commence with the Negropont (the ancient Eubœa) off the chief town of which Egripo (Chalcis,) I lay for some months at anchor in a man-of-war, and during our stay was not more prepossessed in favor of the inhabitants than was Byron when he wrote:

"Was he not born at Egripo?
"A rider race let Israel show,"
—Bride of Abydos.

Turks, Greeks and Jews, with a sprinkling of Ionians, they appeared to be a bad lot, and not a pleasant people to dwell with. Every evil passion had been roused to excess by the barbarities committed on both sides, during the long struggle of the Greeks for independence; the consequences were a great amount of cruelty, craft, lust, and theft. Landing at the town one day, a short time before the Turks evacuated the island, I visited the Pacha's divan, having, with some difficulty persuaded our Greek pilot to accompany me to act as interpreter. He came with no good will, for though under English protection, and aware that the reign of the Turks was nearly over, yet the Pacha's far-famed cruelty had made such an impression on his mind that his nerves were much shaken; his perturbation was sorely increased when, on passing the entrance we noticed four Greek scalps suspended in the hall. Baba Yenni (old John) was the pilot's name. I suppose he had a surname, but I never knew it. He had often expatiated on the heroic actions of his countrymen, twisting his mustachios as he stumped along with his short, thick bandy legs, which were clothed to the knees by his Greek inexpressibles (half-kilt, half-knickerbocker.) I may add that Yenni's costume was not of the true Greek type, but of the composite order. As a substitute for the jaunty red skull cap, with the graceful blue tassel, he wore a broad brimmed straw hat, whilst a pair of ship's shoes (procured from the purser) replaced the buskins. He also wore a blue checked shirt, a black silk handkerchief, and a sailor's blue jacket. As I have remarked, Yenni's courage was of the "Bob Acres" type, and it was soon to oozе entirely away. I asked him to enquire of the Pacha's guards if it was possible to get near to the seat of judgment, and poked him in the ribs to draw his attention to the man whom I touched on the arm at the same time, the latter mistaking my meaning, and concluding that I had brought Yenni as a culprit to be tried, and having as much love for a Greek as a terrier has for a cat, he seized his unresisting victim, who neither bit, scratched or spat, but yelled out "Pilotte Inglese" most lustily, making such a din, that the Pacha ordered him a touch of the strappado forthwith, a sentence which I had some difficulty in getting rescinded. Had the sentence been carried out, I fear the old fellow would have died of fright; as it was, his teeth chattered to that degree that he could hardly interpret what I said in his favor. Had I not been inuniform and slightly known at court (having accompanied the Pacha the previous day when out hunting with his splendid Macedonian greyhounds) I fancy the appeal would have been in vain. I did not, however, get off scot free, for the guard looked piastres so hard at me, that I expended a few in backsheesh. These Pelikise, who form the Pacha's guard, deserved a few tips, as they had no very pleasant time of it, especially should their Lord and master be riled, as instanced by an occurrence which happened at the coursing match I have spoken of. The dogs had been laid on a fox, and one of them caught revenge by the small of the back, who in his death struggle bit through the tendons of one of the hound's legs, laming him for life. Possibly the Pacha thought that one of his guards, who was in at the death, might have interfered; at any rate, he coolly drew a pistol and snapped it at the man's head. Luckily for him these were the days of flint locks, and the weapon missed fire, or there might have been a thrilling incident, not to be chronicled in the newspapers, for I doubt if such an event would have reached the editor of the "Smyrna Gazette," the columns of which paper were filled with articles of a mercantile character, such as the prices of figs and raisins, together with the arrivals and sailings of fruit clippers. Athens itself did not boast of a newspaper in those days. The Turks were then in possession. Greece was still in a chrysalis state. Yenni's fright was so great that there was little to be got out of him, till we were well away from the scene of his troubles. I could make out, however, that justice was administered in a most expeditious manner, the Pacha acting as judge and jury. The cases appeared slight; most of the accused were found guilty, as was made evident when a few strokes of the bastinado were applied—a mode of punishment which has this advantage over imprisonment, that vagabonds are not herded together and made worse, so that a common pilferer leaves prison an accomplished burglar. As administered in Turkey, the man remains at home to provide for his family, his punishment costs the State nothing, and he cannot brag of the lightness of the penalty, as the neighbors see the sentence carried out, and judging from the howling of the poor creatures, the spectators have strong reasons for believing that the infliction is a painful one. I was interested in one of those whose dirty feet were introduced to the stick, and it was afterwards explained to me that he was a Greek who had committed a theft. The Pacha told him that he punished him slightly this time, but added (significantly clutching his throat with his forefinger and thumb) "You will be here again, and then be sure I will hang you." Omar having adopted the motion, "once a thief always a thief," the Pacha was right in this case, though it is to be hoped that the rule has many exceptions. As I was walking in the country with some of my messmates, we espied the thieving Greek suspended to a beautiful, shady mulberry tree growing by the wayside. The fruit was temptingly ripe, but was left untouched by us. The man hung in his clothes, and was a sickening spectacle, his face being black and distorted, his tongue hanging out of his mouth, covered with flies and other insects, whilst our approach disturbed a couple of vultures, who, perched on the wretch's shoulders, were having a squabble for his eyes. The weather was warm, so that beasts of prey scented the carcass from afar. On our return we were informed that on being caught a second time the thief was brought before the Pacha, who proved himself a man of his word, for without any more ado the guard was ordered to carry out the threatened punishment. A short shrift and a short rope was his portion. I was from Roxburghshire, and the circumstance reminded me of the tales of Jeddart justice in the olden time; doubtless there are trees there which have borne strange fruit. I have shown that Omar was not a man to stick at trifles; he was noted for his cruelty during the Greek revolution, and one case in particular may be mentioned. During a skirmish on the mainland, which is reached by a very picturesque bridge, two Greek chiefs were captured. The Pacha treated them well, but while they were at dinner one day a messenger arrived with the intelligence that two of his friends had been killed in a fight with the Greeks. Omar told his guests that they should die, and I doubt if ever a more horrid propitiatory sacrifice was perpetrated. Two frames were prepared, each having four legs, and furnished with five hooks, which were inserted into the small of the back and through the outstretched arms and legs of their victims, in fact they were crucified laying on their backs and put to the terrible torture of being flayed alive. We were informed that this excruciating agony had to be borne for several hours before death released them, the sufferers writhing under a hot sun, and their raw flesh covered with all kinds of insects. Cooper in his novels describes some awful cruelties committed by Indians. They were quite equalled by the wholesale butcheries and unutterable torments sanctioned and carried out by the rulers and authorities of a State numbering among its inhabitants millions of Christians. I would fain speak more of my associations connected with the Negropont, some of them pleasant, a few, very few, the contrary; its Mount Delphi, the mulberry groves at its base, and the bright, clear streams which fall from its sides. I have pleasing recollections of a cascade formed by one of these far beneath it. I had a most refreshing bath, not before it was required, as will be seen. A party of us made a trip to the peak of the mountain, and on our way slept at the house of a Greek. We remained under the mulberry trees outside and smoked several pipes. I know we had some bottles of that vulgar spirit known as gin. We became poetical, but that is easily accounted for when we consider the beauty of the situation in such a classic land, overshadowed by the peak of the mountain, a splendid star spangled sky above us, and lulled by the sound of the neighboring waterfall. No wonder it was dark before we thought of sleeping. Being accustomed to rough it, we did not examine our chamber particularly, but laid ourselves down on the rough boards wrapped in our cloaks. We felt rather uncomfortable in the morning, for this reason that (what our American brethern term) a rooster, with his harem, were perched over our heads. No shampooing process ever refreshed a weary traveler more than did the shower bath from the mountain fall. The day did not end pleasantly for me. We rode mules and as some were lazy, it was proposed to make them fast, head to crupper, but the sulky beast next in line ahead of me, not liking the arrangement, let fly his stern chasers in the shape of his hind feet, striking me in the right knee. Instead of dismounting the enemy's guns he unshipped me, to be dragged by the rope stirrup, which was twisted round one of my ancles. My animal not caring to tow me along in this fashion, used his heels, while there was a chance that the animal astern would walk over me, so that altogether it was an unpleasant predicament. Luckily the cavalcade was brought to a stand still, but not before I had received various bruises, which to say the least of it were inconvenient, as we had just arrived at that part of the mountain where the ascent became too steep to ride. Fortunately I had kind companions to help me along, and the prospect of a long rest when we reached the summit, as we intended spending the night there. Our guide, "Nicolo" by name, was the cause of our next misadventure. When we dismounted we had left him where the mules could feed with their legs secured to prevent them from straying. Unfortunately he had charge of two stone bottles of Hollands like those of John Gilpin:

"Each bottle had a curling ear,
Through which his belt he drew,
And hung a bottle on each side,
To make his balance true."

As has happened to others before, he was tempted, he drank and (what was worse for us) he fell.

"The bottles twain behind his back,
Were severed at a blow."

Yes! he fell and there he lay. Having arrived at our destination, and being tired of waiting for some refreshment, two of our party went in search of him, and were attracted to his whereabouts by the crooning of a very monotonous ditty, apparently as interminable as "Chevy Chase," and which the delinquent poured forth with much satisfaction to himself, though it brought no comfort to his hearers, who lay great store by the bottles, as a means of keeping out the cold which was likely to be pretty severe on such an elevated spot. Nicolo had imbibed plenty of the spirit, and his clothes were well saturated, so that he offered a tempting object for a rear dragon. He was left to sleep off the effects. Meanwhile we conjured up all kinds of lies and excuses he was likely to make. That he would tell the truth was not to be thought of. In about two hours our guide appeared. He thought himself very clever, and would only explain himself in Greek, which he spoke with great volubility. By his using the word "aya" prefixed to the names of many Greek saints, we were led to understand that he was swearing "by all that was holy;" however, we made him find his tongue in "lingua Franca" by threatening to complain of him to the Pacha on our return, when not a para would he receive, but he was well aware that he would get a touch of the bastinado instead. The very name of Omar was a terror to evildoers. Nicolo was not aware that he had been discovered drunk, so he coolly accounted for the accident by stating that there was a chapel dedicated to Aya Nicolo, about half a mile from where he had left the mules, and that he had taken the opportunity of visiting the shrine of his patron saint with the intention of saying a few prayers, but he supposed the saint was displeased at his approaching so holy a spot carrying two bottles of spirits, for whilst crossing himself on the threshold, he fell into a kind of trance, in which he saw the saint looking down on him with a severe countenance. When he came to himself he was quite giddy, and still suffered from a severe headache. Nicolo was chopfallen and did not attempt an excuse when we told him he had been visited where he fell, and that we would accompany him to the spot. Our guide had no wish for further proof, but, by way of atonement for his short comings, proposed to visit a village a few miles distant, where his uncle resided, whose wine was famous throughout the Island and some of which he would bring back with him. He could also promise raki and aqua ordente, besides certain preparations of milk, such as Teree and Yacoot. Of course we agreed to this arrangement, and Nicolo returned, accompanied by his old uncle bringing a pig skin of the wine and other articles. Of the juice of the grape there was sufficient, but if it was the best manufactured on the island, the vintage of the Eubœa is not what it was said once to have been. It was precious thin and was cured with resin. The venerable relative, who made the best wine in the island, assured us that if we drank sufficient we would soon become partial to the resin, which was a specific for almost every complaint. Perceiving that we had with us an earthen pipkin and sugar, the uncle volunteered to compound some mulled wine, which he strengthened with some of the alcohol. If anything the resin must have been wholesome, for though the pipkin was often filled, and the pig skin much reduced in bulk before midnight, yet none of us were the worse. Many sea and sentimental songs were sung, the Greeks chanted some doleful ballads and performed (chebongne in hand) what was supposed to be classic dances. The uncle, as wine muller to the party, had used his privilege by tasting the brew so often that he became unsteady, and during the performance walked into the fire, upsetting and breaking the pipkin. We had our revenge, for being unshod, he burnt his feet, which so enraged him, that he accused Nicolo of being awkward and of being the cause of the damage. The nephew retorted, using vituperative expressions, and had we not interfered the relatives would probably have come to blows. As it was the calumet of peace was smoked all round before taking our repose. We arose quite fresh before day, the uncle lamenting that there was no wine left, it being very wholesome the first thing in the morning. The sun awakening, we had nothing to detain us and soon made our descent, all were in good humor, the venerable relative had charged and was paid many piastres more than the value of his supplies. Nicolo had lost all shame of his misdemeanor and hinted on his way back that he had done a little business on his own account. When he went for the wine he visited his fiancee, and was anxious that we should honor his nuptials with our presence. He was the accepted of his cousin the daughter of the uncle who had been so zealous in our service. The fair one, according to Nicolo, was possessed of many charms, not the smallest of which appeared to be "a roker" of gold sequins which decked her hair. We, the excursionists, enjoyed the trip amazingly. The bad treatment I had received from the mule soon wore off, and the expense of our outing was but trifling, though we had paid Milordi's prices for everything. Being at Egripo, I may mention a phenomenon observable from the bridge, which connects the island with Boeatia. The channels expand rapidly into gulfs below the bridge, tending nearly N. W. towards the Gulf of Volo, and S. E. in the direction of Cape Calonna. Standing on the bridge a current is noticed moving rapidly, say S. E. It will suddenly stop, in a short time rush off in a contrary direction. Though careful observations extending over some months, and at different seasons, were made, no reason could be assigned for this freak of the waters; neither changes of the moon, or the winds, appear to effect these sudden fluctuations, and the current is felt only at short distances from the bridge. I have either heard, or read, that some old Greek philosopher committed suicide, he having endeavored in vain to unravel this mystery. From the bridge in summer it is curious to watch two vessels approaching with studdingsails set from different directions, and bringing up along with them a fresh sea breeze, which dies away as they approach the bridge.

Effect of Chamberlain's Speech.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Chamberlain's speech has seriously aggravated the quarrel in the Conservative party. Moderate Tories express shame over the contrast between Churchill's avoidance and Chamberlain's defiance of Parnell. They urge that the party should forthwith break loose from Churchill, disavow his speeches, and clearly define the attitude of the party toward Parnell in terms no less emphatic than those of the Radical leader. If Chamberlain had aimed to throw a bomb into the Tory camp his shot could not have been more successful. Parnell has not been hurt by the Radical leader's onslaught, or, if he has, he is determined not to show his injuries. The general impression is that he asked for more than he expects to gain, and that he is now calmly awaiting the effects of his demand. He does not propose to notice Chamberlain's speech until he issues his address to the electors of Cork. William O'Brien, however, is less diplomatic, and has announced his intention of sacrificing the Radical leader in the next number of the United Ireland.

Wanted to See the Queen.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A lunatic was arrested in Buckingham palace yesterday while seeking an interview with the Queen. He had an ordinary glass bottle, which he insisted upon presenting to the Queen, which he said was a magic mirror, which would enable her to see through every day.

France's Losses by the Late War.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Letters from China represent that France lost 15,000 men in the Tonquin campaign, and that her losses in money, including the cost of building forts, hospitals and frontier defences, were £48,000,000, while China's losses were 100,000 men and £68,000,000.

By taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla many a poor sufferer who submits to the surgeon's knife because of malignant sores and scrofulous swellings, might be saved sound and whole. This will purge out the corruptions which pollute the blood, and by which such complaints are originated and fed.

THE SQUAK MASSACRE.

Five White Men and Four Indians Implicated in the Brutal Murder.

Sheriff McCraw, Prosecuting Attorney Ronald, Dr. Dawson and Chief Woolery returned to Seattle from their trip to Squak valley, where they went to inquire into the cause which led to the murder of the Chinese there, and to apprehend the perpetrators of the crime if possible, by Thursday's train, bringing in the bodies of the three murdered Chinese, and having in charge Perry Bayne, blacksmith at Squak; Sam Robertson, employed at Tibbetts and Wilson's dairy; Joe Day, an employee of George W. Tibbetts; M. De Witt Rumsey, fireman in Tibbetts' hop house; Wm. Hughes, formerly a coal miner at Renton, but lately a rancher at Squak, and two Indians, Johnny and Curley, charged with the commission of the crime.

The Post-Intelligencer says that in thoroughly examining into the circumstances surrounding the affair, and finding out the parties who had visited Wold Brothers' ranch the Saturday evening before to demand the removal of the Chinese, the Sheriff could form a pretty good idea of who the guilty parties were, and these, with many others, were summoned as witnesses before the Coroner's jury, in order that they might be on hand when wanted, provided a case was made out against them.

Prosecuting Attorney Ronald conducted the examination of witnesses, while the Coroner took down the testimony in writing.

The first witness sworn was Gong Hing, who testified that he was in a tent on Wold Brothers' hop ranch on Monday night. There were 37 Chinamen and 16 tents. Chinamen come out to pick hops for Wold Brothers. About 10 o'clock Monday night white men come to kill Chinamen. Three Chinamen were killed, Yeng Son, aged 30; Mong Goat, aged 32, and Fung Wooey, aged 35. So many shots fired it sounded all same China New Year. Yeng Son was shot through left arm, through both thighs and through ankle. Died about 9:30 a. m., Tuesday. Knew he was going to die. Told the boys he would die, sure. Died in an hour after telling me this. Told me the white men come and killed him. He was sorry to die. Had a son at home, too young, no one send him money. He did not talk much, but hollered through the night. Fung Wooey was shot through the left breast. Mong Goat was shot in the belly. Don't remember how many other shots. He lived about half an hour altogether. In fifteen minutes the China boys come back. Found Mong Goat groaning on bank of creek. Put him in bed. He died fifteen minutes afterward.

Other witnesses were then sworn, corroborating the statement as those who participated in the crime. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the three Chinamen, named Yuen Sin, Mong Goat and Fung Wee, and that they were killed on or about the night of Sept. 7, 1885, in their camp on the hop ranch of Wold Bros., by gun and pistol wounds inflicted by M. De Witt Rumsey, Joseph Day, Perry Bayne, David Hughes, Samuel Robertson, Indian Curley, Indian Johnny and other persons to the jury unknown.

THE CAMPAIGN ISSUES.

Gladstone's Alleged Designs—A Mild Parnellism—An Empty Conservative Programme.

The event of the past week has been the speech of the Marquis of Hartington. It is generally accepted as foreshadowing the campaign issues which will be advanced by the Liberals. The speech was so moderate, and so utterly disclaimed the more revolutionary projects of the Radicals that it has angered the Tories, and it would appear as if Lord Hartington had cleverly taken the ground from under the Conservatives. It is thought that Gladstone may have inspired Lord Hartington, that the latter's speech was put out as a "feeler," and that it will soon be backed up by a powerful address by Gladstone. This would leave the situation thus: The Tories under the lead of Lord Randolph Churchill, advocating a sort of mild Parnellism; the Radicals, led by Joseph Chamberlain, urging extreme home rule; the real Conservatives and Whigs not far apart, and a large body of Liberals and Tories in a state of doubt, but with prejudices hostile to the Parnellites. As Gladstone is supposed to desire the return of his party to power, with votes enough to make it independent in parliament, it is surmised that he will seek to combine the Whigs and moderate Conservatives against the Irish party, calculating upon securing Radicals enough for any purpose he may desire in the House of Commons. This scheme, if successful, would enable the Liberals in the next house to throw the Parnellites out from their present position of the balance of power. The Irish party would then go to pieces. It would solve the Irish problem by concessions which would placate the people of Ireland, and leave Mr. Parnell without an issue. The question of independence would disappear. Jere Collins, Radical member for Ipswich, speaking at Saltburn, Yorkshire, to-day, denounced Lord Hartington's address. He described the programme as "empty," and said it had already done much to destroy Liberal unity. It would appear, however, that the destruction of this unity is essential to Mr. Gladstone's purpose, if, as is supposed, that purpose is to draw Conservatives and Whigs together against the Parnellites and Churchillites, for the old Conservatives will not support a party closely wedged to the Radicals. Chamberlain is booked for a political address at Warrington, Lancaster county, next Tuesday. He is expected to reply to Lord Hartington's address. Mr. Chamberlain's extreme policy, but the more moderate Radicals are deprecating this idea and urging Mr. Chamberlain to refrain from openly splitting from the Whigs. Lord Randolph Churchill's speech at Sheffield was a direct response to Mr. Parnell's challenge to English parties to declare themselves on the Irish issue, and indicated that he is willing to make further concessions to the Home Rulers. Lord Randolph's health is at present far from good, and, under medical advice he is about to take a month's holiday. Mr. Parnell's advice to his followers to discontinue agrarian outrages is perceptibly bearing good fruit.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

POUNDMAKER is allowed to wear his hair in the Winnipeg penitentiary. He is studying botany under the tuition of Mr. Alexander Fisher.

THE Democratic central committee of Ohio has sent an invitation to Gen. Rosecrans, register of the treasury, to speak in that place during the pending campaign.

BONANZA KING MACKAY has backed ED. STOKES, the murderer of JIM FISK, in the Hoffman house in New York, to the extent of $600,000. The banquet hall alone cost $50,000.

THE traffic returns of the Grand Trunk Railway for the week ending Aug. 29th, were $305,422; for the same time in 1884, $363,046—a decrease of $57,624.

THE Elk Rapids Iron company, Michigan, has received an order for 400 tons of charcoal iron, to be shipped to England; probably the first iron of western manufacture ever shipped from America.

A GENERAL advertisement will be issued on the 15th instant by the postmaster general, calling for proposals for rendering steamboat mail service in all points of the United States.

THE importation of rags and second hand clothing from Montreal is prohibited. Local boards of health in the west are empowered to proceed with compulsory vaccination where cases of smallpox are reported.

DR. TALMAGE, declining to be the Prohibition gubernatorial candidate in New York, says "that the cause will march on to complete success is as certain as that God did not make the world to have it destroyed by a deluge of strong drink.

THE Ontario government passed an order-in-council authorizing the provincial board of health to appoint inspectors with power to board all trains and steamboats coming westward from Montreal, compell passengers to produce certificates of vaccination or be vaccinated on the spot.

THE salaries of the British Cabinet are: Secretary Foreign Affairs and Lord of the Treasury, $50,000; Chancellor of the Exchequer, $25,000; Lord High Chancellor, $50,000; Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, $100,000; Lord Pres. of Privy Council, $20,000; Secretary for Colonies, $25,000; Home Secretary, $25,000; Secretary for War, $25,000; Secretary for India, $25,000; First Lord of the Admiralty, $22,500; Lord Chancellor of Ireland, $80,000; President Board of Trade $10,000.

UNDER date of August 12, the Labour News reports that the labor market is in an unsettled state in many districts The building industries continue in a fairly brisk condition. The boot and shoe industries are moderately active. The strike of the Oldham cotton spinners remains in about the same state, and there is little or no prospect of an early settlement, as the operatives in other districts are liberally rendering support, although short time is, in most cases, the rule. There is a serious dispute among the yarn spinners in Forfar and district. In the textile trades matters are anything but lively, and there is but little demand for operatives, for in many cases only partial time is being made. Affairs are more settled among the coal miners.

JAMES J. HILL, president of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railway, is taking stock in a number of North Dakota banks. This irrepressible Northwesterner will soon own most of the Red River Valley on the American side. With stock farms, railways, union depots, coal mines, banks and a dozen other things, "JIM" HILL ought to be satisfied with his work since his departure from Guelph, Ont., some twenty-five years ago. The country north of St. Paul has long been the camping ground of Canadians. NICOLLET and HENNEPIN, the French-Canadian priests, were the pioneer explorers in the great lone land. NORMAN KITTSON, hailing from the province of Quebec, has for many years been associated with traffic on the Red River and KITTSON's line of steamers was to the Northwest what all the railways are now. HILL has capped the climax of Canadian enterprise in that region and a shrewder, more enterprising man does not live there. And yet Canadians are "slow." So says the Canadian-American.

AT LOGGERHEADS.

The senior subsidized organ of the government in this city and its ally of New Westminster are at issue on the defense question. The old axiom of "when thieves fall out honest men may expect to get their own" is likely to be verified ere the present discussion is ended. Both the organs display woeful ignorance and dull stupidity in the matter, which is not by any means a local, sectional issue; but one of the utmost importance to the entire nation and the empire to which we belong. THE TIMES is persuaded that the authorities will so consider the matter, and that not only will the present scheme of fortifications at Esquimalt and in the neighborhood of this city be extended, but that attention will likewise be given to Nanaimo, whose coal fields are of such prime importance in times of peace, and doubly so in time of war; that the entrance of the Fraser river will command attention, and that the commercial and shipping centre certain to arise at the terminus of the Canadian Pacific railway will receive that consideration which its importance will demand. It is the veriest nonsense for the Colonist to assert that in the strengthening of the fortifications here rests the absolute security of the mainland. Were it impossible to reach the coast line there in any other way than through this gateway there might be a semblance of reason in the ground taken by our contemporary, but a coast line that can be reached through the channel to the north and east of this island, as well as from the straits and the gulf, is afforded little or no protection by Victoria's defences, no matter how impregnable they may be rendered.

In matters fraught with such importance as is the protection of our province, sectional jealousy should not be allowed to outweigh other considerations. Victoria, as the metropolis of the British possessions in the North Pacific, will always command that consideration to which her position entitles her. The vulnerable points on the mainland should undoubtedly be rendered impregnable, for the protection of lives and valuable property, for it is to the mainland, after all, that we must look for our future advancement, and which must be an important factor in our prosperity, and with the development of the great interior will Victoria keep pace. The unnecessary fling of the Colonist at property owners at Coal Harbor comes with very bad grace from a source that has been in the past considered as the greatest of sinners among "boomers." In this case it is the pot calling the kettle black, for while some that are supposed to have an interest in the Columbian are known to be heavy owners of real estate at Coal Harbor, it is equally certain that the Colonist is interested in Victoria real estate. Therefore it is impossible to receive from either an unbiased judgment; so we shall calmly await the denoument likely to follow this outburst.

CANNOT HAVE TWO CHARACTERS.

A few days since, in discussing the bye elections in Ontario, THE TIMES took the ground that each of the contending political parties in Canada, the United States and Britain were now bringing forward for the suffrages of the electorate men of unblemished reputation. The Toronto Week likewise takes the question up and as usual discusses the relation that should exist between the public and private character of the politician. It boldly asserts that a man cannot have two characters—one private and the other public; he must always be the same man, and his disposition in all spheres must be the same. If he is dishonest and mendacious in private he will be equally dishonest and mendacious in public; such, at least, will be his tendency, though it may be curbed by publicity and the other restraints of public life; you cannot trust him in one line of action any more than you can trust him in the other. The real question appears to be: What effect is produced on the general character by a particular class of vices, and especially by sexual licentiousness? Can a man be dissolute in his habits and at the same time a man of honor, a patriot and trustworthy as a public servant? It is not easy to give a precise answer to that question. SOMERS, though licentious, was the most upright of public men. WALPOLE, who kept a mistress, and encouraged orgies at Houghton, was a very good minister, and gave the country sound finances and a long peace, though he corrupted public life and went, against his conscience, into the war with Spain rather than resign his power. Fox was a gambler and a patriot; but the recklessness of the gambler was visible in his public conduct, and did much mischief to his party and the country. In the eighteenth century, if licentiousness had been a bar to public employment, it would have been difficult to fill the offices of State. The best of our early kings, EDWARD I., was also a model of domestic virtue, and if parliament, as a permanent and organized institution, was the monument of his magnanimous wisdom, ELEANOR's Crosses were the monuments of his pure and constant love. From his figure, if the eye is carried down the line of great and beneficent statesmen, it will be found that they have generally resembled him in both parts of their character. This is eminently true with regard to the leading Puritans, and notably with regard to CROMWELL himself; while the best of the Cavaliers, such as FALKLAND, HYDE and BEVIL GRENVILLE were Puritans in morals. To exclude or expel a man from public life because he has once yielded to passion would be extravagant, and the people of the United States have shown their usual good sense in putting their best man at their head, notwithstanding the single blemish on his moral character, his manly and becoming avowal of which showed that there was nothing wrong in his heart. But history teaches that it is wise to choose for the service of the State characters sound in all their parts, and that public virtue of the highest kind is seldom divorced from purity of affection.

Are Indigestion and Constipation. Their primary symptoms are among the most distressing of minor human ailments, and a host of diseases, speedily resultant from them, mutually aggravate each other and assail at once the whole machinery of life. Nausea, Foul Breath, Sour Stomach, Dizziness, Headaches, Bilious Fever, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Kidney Diseases, Piles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, and various Skin Disorders, are among the symptoms and maladies caused by derangement of the stomach and bowels.

A Thorough Purgative

medicine is the first necessity for cure. Then the cathartic effect must be maintained, in a mild degree, just sufficient to prevent a recurrence of costiveness, and at the same time the liver, kidneys and stomach must be stimulated and strengthened.

Ayer's Pills

Accomplish this restorative work better than any other medicine. They are searching and thorough, yet mild, in their purgative action. They do not gripe the patient, and do not induce a costive reaction, as is the effect of other cathartics. Withal, they possess special properties, diuretic, hepatic and tonic, of the highest medicinal value and

Absolutely Cure

All diseases proceeding from disorder of the digestive and assimilatory organs. The prompt use of AYER's PILLS to correct the first indications of costiveness, averts the serious illnesses which neglect or that condition would inevitably induce. All irregularities in the action of the bowels—looseness as well as constipation—are beneficially controlled by AYER's PILLS, and for the stimulation of digestive organs weakened by long-continued dyspepsia, one or two of AYER's PILLS daily, after dinner, will do more good than anything else.

THE BOTTLE.

"I believe I'll have a glass of something comfortable," said Tom Barnaby.

Tom Barnaby was not a member of any temperance society whatever, and had no dislike to the taste of liquor. Not that he was a drinking man. Oh, dear, no! Never was drunk in his life; never even slightly overcome by liquor. But still—well, still, a nice glass of something comfortable struck Tom in a pleasant light, and he generally took it when it did.

To-night it was cold and chilly and gloomy, and the wind rattled the shutters and crooned down the chimney, and made a banshee of itself along the street; and Tom, who was not very fond of reading, could not lay himself in book or magazine, and there was no one to talk to, and the resolution above recorded seemed to be the most natural thing in the world. "A glass of something comfortable," said Tom, "and a biscuit, and then I'll turn in."

Then Tom went to the closet to look for a vessel in which to bring the necessary liquor for the comfortable something from the corner store, and spied on an upper shelf a green bottle, with a fat body and a long neck, which had nothing in it, and smelled of nothing, and he set it upon the table, while he stirred the fire and put the kettle on, that everything might be ready on his return.

Mrs. Tom was absent from home, and Tom was keeping house for himself. He was on his knees before the stove, raking it, when he heard a groan. It was a faint, far-away sounding groan; but it had such a ghostly sound that he started.

"What's that?" he cried; and something answered:

"Only me."

And jumping to his feet, Tom Barnaby stood staring about; for there was nothing in the room that ought to have had a voice but himself—not even a kitten or canary bird.

"Who is me?" cried Tom.

"Tom ought to know," said the voice.

And this time Tom saw it came from the green bottle.

"Hanged if it isn't the bottle!" said Tom. "Is it spirits, or what?"

And the bottle answered:

"Yes, worse luck. It is spirits. Bad spirits, too. Gin, rum and brandy—whisky and alcohol!"

"Oh, that kind!" said Tom.

"Yes," said the bottle. "Five devils. I've been possessed by them all. Years and years they led me such a life that I wished I was smashed; years and years until your wife got me and put blessed vinegar in me. Nice, sharp, respectable vinegar, that never did worse than give some poor cabbage eater the colic. And I thought I should end my days as a decent vinegar bottle, and here I am—going to have one of the devils back, I know. Oh, what did that dear woman go away for? Why did she go?"

Tom, who had grown used to the phenomenon of a talking bottle, and did not mind it at all by this time, nodded his head sagely.

"Right there," he said. "It's exceedingly uncomfortable to have wife away, but you are very foolish to talk as you do. What harm is there in a moderate drink? All you'd hold wouldn't hurt a fly. You've been listening to teetotallers."

"I haven't been listening to anybody," said the bottle. "I've formed my own conclusions. There was a time when I thought as you do. It was when I was a brand new bottle, with a gilt label, 'Best Holland Gin,' on me, and my owner, the liquor dealer, took me out of my case and handed me to Jack Barker, who had just finished painting the store.

"'Here, Jack,' says he, 'this will help you keep Christmas.'

"'Thank ye,' said Jack; and off I went under his arm.

"And there, in a bright little room, with a pretty wife and a nice old grandfather, and two cunning little babies looking on, he opened me.

"'What a nice smell!' said she—the pretty wife.

"And then he made some stuff with lemon and sugar, and they all drank some, and the babies looked at the light shining through my green sides and the gilt label on me. And the old grandfather said the drink had gone to his head, and he should have to be carried up-stairs, and they laughed at that, because it was such a good joke.

"I liked myself then and what was in me.

"Before I was empty the first time I felt pleased to be such a favorite as I was.

"Ah, dear, I was filled up again and again, and again; and after awhile I began to see things change in and about me. The wife's face was not so bright; the old grandfather never laughed; the baby's teeth were out, and one day Jack staggered in, took me up, drank the last drop from me, and tumbled it to a chair. The wife began to cry.

"'Oh, Jack!' says she. 'Oh, Jack! how I hate that dreadful bottle. We were so happy before it came into the house!'

"She blamed me, but I knew it was the evil spirit in me that she meant.

"'You've lost your place, Jack,' says she. 'Everything has changed. You don't live no any more. You don't care for the children. It's all that bottle.'

"But Jack was too tipsy to care what she said. He staggered over to the table, took me by the neck and carried me to a liquor store. There they put another evil into me. That one drove the furniture out of the house; bit by bit it was pawned.

"Then they left the house itself and were living in a cellar somewhere. She took in washing; some of the money she earned went for more evil spirits to fill me.

"Didn't I loathe myself? One night I sat on the table and saw the old grandfather lying dead and Jack drunk on the floor at the foot of the bed. Didn't I loathe my self! I tried to topple off, but I couldn't manage it. If ever a bottle did desire to smash itself, I did. But it was no use. Happy bottles, beautiful cut glass cologne bottles, innocent water bottles have been broken when they most desired to last, no doubt; but I, we, had become a dwelling place for devils, I lasted.

"They carried the old grandfather away, and his poor daughter got a black dress somehow. One night Jack went sneaking out of the house with a bundle under one arm and me under the other. The bundle was his wife's mourning dress for her father. He took it to a pawn-shop and pawned it for enough to fill me twice. The poor woman never had a decent dress again.

"She was in rags. She was hungry. I've seen Jack clutch her hand and wrench the wedding ring off her finger, intending to wrench it from it, and then go off with me. Think of it! I had to aid and abet him, and hear her say things about me that were very natural, seeing she did not know how I hated the devils that lived in me, and that were hard to bear. But he fell down stairs with me in his pocket, and broke his head, and didn't break me. He hit me against things, to their injury, not mine. I must have a guardian devil, I lasted so.

"One day—it was such a bitter day, ice and snow and sleet everywhere—just five years from the Christmas I'd been made a present to Jack, he stood, ragged and dirty, at a bar-room store, with me in his pocket—my neck sticking out. In came the proprietor.

"'Now, Jack Barker,' says he, 'why don't you go home?'

"He was ashamed to have him there, you see, a ragged creature with his hair out and a black eye and a broken nose. He used to be called Handsome Jack Barker before he took to filling me. Think of that.

"Now he looked up with a miserable, abject whine.

"'Go home with an empty bottle on a Christmas eve!' says he. 'You didn't use to say go home when I came here with full pockets, Mr. Jones.'

"'Well, no, I didn't,' said the man; 'but it would have been better if I had. I'll fill your bottle for you, Jake Barker.'

"He filled it—goodness knows with what—and the poor wretch staggered home. Oh, the wretched cellar; the miserable straw bed in the corner; the wife lying sick upon it. I remember them so well.

"She was very sick, and there was a little baby beside her. Just think of another baby there.

"'Happy Christmas!' said he, as he staggered in. 'Happy Christmas, old girl!'

"'Happy!' said she. 'Oh, this dreadful day!' That bottle came to us first on Christmas.'

It takes so little to put a drunken man in a rage. He answered with an oath.

"'Anybody would think I was drunk to hear you talk,' said he. And the poor woman answered:

"'Oh, good heaven! are you ever sober? Oh, Jack! Jack!'

"And then he flew at her. He took me by the neck and beat her over the head with me. The cork fell out and the liquor poured over her breast and over the face of the little baby lying upon it. It mingled with her blood.

"At first she screamed. Then she lay still. Her face grew white. I knew I was a murderer. 'Oh, let me break!' I cried. 'Let me be broken into fragments!' But her fair flesh was mashed to pulp, her delicate bones broken, and I was sound answer, when Jack, led by Heaven knows what mad fancy, left his victim and staggered into the street again. The snow was falling. The air was white with it. He staggered along muttering to himself. At last he came to a wharf, and stumbled across it. I believe a boat lay there on which he had been once before and on which they had given him drink.

"'Sea Bird, ahoy! cried he. 'Hullo! hullo! Sea Bird, ahoy!'

"Nobody answered him.

"'I'm coming abroad,' he muttered—'I'm coming abroad. I shan't stay at home to be preached to. I'm my own master.'

"Then he took one step more. Splash—crash! He was through the thin ice under the water.

"'Thank Heaven,' said I, my miserable career is ended.

"Then I turned cold as ice myself, and there was a roaring in my neck.

"Next thing I knew it was broad daylight, and I was floating on the water.

"'There's a bottle' said some one. It was a bare-legged boy. He stooped over the side of a boat and caught me.

"'There was a man drowned here last night,' said he to another boy at his side.

"'Did you see him?' said this one.

"'Yes,' said the first. 'He was drunk, and killed his wife. They've got an inquest on her, down in the cellar over there. I say, I'm going to sell this bottle to Bill, the junk man.'

"So, I was saved, and much against my will stood in the junk shop window for a week. The water had washed the blood off of me. I had no smell of liquor left, and along comes your wife.

"'What a nice, flat bottle!' says she, 'just what I want. How much for it?'

"And Billy charged her 4 cents, and home she brought me.

"'My career of vice has begun again,' said I. 'And I expected nothing else, but, bless the dear soul, she put vinegar in me—nice, sour, innocent, respectable vinegar—and I've been a good reformed bottle ever since. And now you—you—you—her husband, are going to put the devilish spirits into me again. For Heaven's sake, break me first! I don't want to destroy another household.'

"You shan't," said Tom Barnaby. "Here you go back on your shelf. I leave you to innocence and vinegar; and I think I'll make a cup of strong coffee."

"Right," said the bottle.

And so the bottle stands still beside the cruet on Mrs. Barnaby's dresser; and Tom Barnaby is still a sober man.

Burial Customs in Timur.

[Chicago Herald.]

The burial of a relative in Timur is a very serious and expensive business. It involves a gift to the deceased from all his blood relatives, and, in return, a burial feast. If the deceased is a man of rank, this feast is a matter very often of ruin to the family. The festivity must be given, and at the same time the hospitality is expected to be extraordinarily lavish. Consequently it often happens that the day of the funeral is indefinitely postponed for months, and even for years, until the family has had time to accumulate sufficient wealth of cattle and substance. In the meantime the corpse is inclosed in matting, and housed either in a tree or a hut and left to itself. Then for days there is a savage banqueting and reveling, and the interment at last is carried out. Among the more savage races of the Timur Laut islands and Timur the skull of an ancestor is severed after burial and kept as a relic in a place of honor within the house.

New York Sun Cholera Mixture.

There is a famous cholera cure known to some of the old people of '32. Years ago The New York Sun obtained the recipe from some one who remembered it, and published it. It is a well-tested medicine, and has brought relief a thousand times. It is republished almost every year in the journal in which it first appeared. It is too late for cholera to ravage our shores with its worst terrors this year. But cut this formula out, anyhow, and keep it:

Take equal parts of tincture of cayenne, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint, and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose fifteen to thirty drops in a wineglass of water, according to age and violence of the attack. Repeat every fifteen or twenty minutes until relief is obtained.

Eucalyptus Gum.

It is stated that the recently patented process for the manufacture of a gum of the eucalyptus globulus, which has the effect of thoroughly removing the scales which form on steam engine boilers and preventing rust and pitting, has created a largely increased demand for it both in this country and in Europe. The effect of this preparation in thus preventing the pitting and corrosion of boilers will, it is expected, extend the period of their usefulness 100 or 150 per cent., and at the same time insure a very considerable saving in fuel, as scale is a non-conductor of heat. The distillation of eucalyptol from the leaves of this tree is another branch of industry.

The Red Spot on Jupiter.

The great red spot on Jupiter is disappearing in a curious way. An oval white spot now covers all its central portion, leaving only a narrow ring of the red substance visible around its edge. The white spot is quite regular in form, and very nearly concentric with the red spot, which it appears to be gradually covering up. Its whiteness is not very intense, but about the time as that of the general surface of the planet near it, so that as soon as it covers the red ring still remaining all traces of the remarkable phenomenon which has been watched with so much interest for the last eight years will be entirely lost.

Torpedoes from a Balloon.

E. A. Gower lately read a paper before the Royal United Service Institution on a "System of Air Torpedoes." The author proposed to launch against an approaching army aerostats carrying 100 pound shells of gun cotton, which would explode at a given time.

Ambulances for the Fallen.

[Exchange.]

An American physician, Dr. Nachtel, has, during the last five years, made considerable efforts to organize ambulances in Paris to pick up persons who from any cause fall down in the public streets. It is computed that 3,000 accidents occur annually in the streets, without any assistance to the sufferers.

THE FASHIONS.

Late Summer Dresses.

WALKING DRESS, EVENING COSTUME.

On the left is a stylish walking dress, with colored lace front. Tabbier tunic and plastron of colored lace worked on tulle. Alpaca jacket bodice and back drapery to velvet skirt. High and revers velvet collar. Straw bonnet covered with tulle, and trimmed with roses. Parasols covered with lace.

On the right is shown an exquisite summer evening toilet, with scarf drapery. A lace scarf, or one of tulle trimmed with lace, is draped about the shoulders and waist in the manner shown. One end is fastened over the breast, the other is carried around the shoulders, down the front, and fastened at the side with a long bow of ribbon. The elbow sleeves are trimmed with lace and ribbon to match.

Two Stylish Collars for Children.

FIG. 1. FIG. 2.

Fig. 1 shows a collar of congress canvas and crochet work for little girls. It is hemmed narrow upon the front and bottom and trimmed with crochet lace and insertion. A strip of canvas is between the lace and insertion. The collar is pleated to a pretty heading of lace and ribbon.

Fig. 2 is a crochet collar.

The Trousseau of Beatrice.

Have you any curiosity about the sort of trousseau a princess has? I have seen the sketches and materials of some of Princess Beatrice's trousseau frocks, which are being made by Redfern. One is a very pretty brown and blue shot-tweed, with silk to match. The skirt is of the latter, and is arranged in wide perpendicular pleats. The bodice and tunic are of the tweed, the front of the bodice being trimmed with folds of the silk, arranged fichu-fashion. A pretty little jacket to go with this gown is made of the tweed, lined with peacock-colored satin, and trimmed with the shot-silk down the fronts, which are straight, though the back fits tightly to the figure.

Another nice frock is of grenat blanket cloth, the long wide plaits on the skirt being separated by folds of Ottoman silk in the same color. There is also a vest of the Ottoman, the bodice and scarf drapery being of the cloth. A jacket is made to accompany this frock, the material being the blanket cloth. It fastens from the left shoulder, and is trimmed round all the outlines with fine sable.

A gown of navy blue cloth is cut out in scallops, which fall over a trimming of interlaced cardinal red braid. A similar but narrower trimming edges the tunic, which is quite short. The fronts of the bodice are scalloped over a vest of interlaced red braid, and the sleeves are finished at the cuffs to match.

The jacket corresponding with this is of navy cloth, edged with one row of cardinal braid. A revers, turned back at the side of the chest, is lined with red silk; and a smaller revers, turned back at the right side of the basque, shows a similar lining. This is a very effective little arrangement, and one quite new to my experience.

A cream colored cloth is made over a skirt of pale blue veiling, being quite plain except for a narrow plaiting round the edge. The bodice of this fastens diagonally from the left shoulder by means of carved mother-of-pearl buttons. The vest and cuffs are pale blue.

Another cream colored dress is of Cairo cloth, with pleated skirt and scarf-like tunic made of cream colored satin. The bodice of this gown is pleated and worn with a belt.

Princess Beatrice was married in white satin gown, made with train, and low neck and short sleeves. The front was covered with Honiton lace, the same worn by Queen Victoria at her marriage. The long Honiton point veil was also that worn by the queen at her marriage.

At Beatrice's wedding her majesty wore a black toilet of broche silk and grenadine.

Striped Dresses.

Stripes are the favorite design for lawn, gingham and zephyr dresses this season. They are worn in the nearest pencilled line on white, or in a series of lines of different widths, or in alternating stripes half an inch wide of two shades of a color, or else in bolder wide stripes of blue, brown, or red on white. Skirts are given variety by arranging the stripes in odd ways; thus the apron stripes are crosswise, while the back drapery has lengthwise stripes. The lower skirt, which is seen only in front and on the sides, is plaited in crosswise stripes for tall, slender figures, and in lengthwise stripes for those who are short and stout. The gathered belled waists and the sleeves have the stripes taken lengthwise. Very little lace is put on such dresses as it washes badly, a collar, belt and cuffs of embroidery being used instead.

The milkmaid overskirt is becoming as popular as the homespun lower skirt. This overskirt is pretty for dresses of two materials, one striped and the other plain. The overskirt is turned upward on the left to the belt, and this is covered with the striped part, while the remainder on the right side is of plain goods. In other dresses the stripes are used alone for the basques while the skirts are of plain fabric relieved by trimming; in still others this is reversed, the stripes forming the skirt and drapery for a basque of plain goods.

The Babies.

Certain colors play a prominent part in the toilets of children this season. Blue and red were great favorites a short time ago; in fact, blue seemed to predominate. Now all soft, pale shades are allowed.

Babies' pelisses are made almost always of the old shape; perhaps the pelerine is a trifle shorter, but that is the only real difference. Trimmings and materials are, however, to be seen in immense variety, the latter being of guipure, point lace circular, etc., then lovely hand embroideries in silk, and silk fringes to match; when ornamented with lace, small bows touching the silk lining, if the foundation stuff be tulle, ottoman or etamine are arranged between the fan plaits of the deep bands of plush of soft, delicate colors are also employed as finishes on such pelisses. The Mother Hubbard is disappearing.

Questions Answered.

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing is the world for allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly

"Some form of Hope!!!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs, Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically, "Buchu!!!"

Ask the same physicians

What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you

Mandrake! or Dandelion!!!

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable,

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed, which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER I.

Patients"

"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women gone nearly crazy!!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefullness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory and chronic or suffering from scrofula.

Erysipelas!

"Saltrheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia indigestion, and, in fact, almost all diseases frail"

Nature is heir to.

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

☞ None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

While the TIMES is always pressed to give publicity to the views of correspondents on any question of interest to the public, provided fair and decorous language is used, we do not hold ourselves responsible for the views expressed by the writers thereof.

Nor can we give room to duplicates of letters that have appeared in our contemporaries either in this city or elsewhere in the province. Correspondents, therefore, will save time and trouble in preparing such for THE TIMES, as they will be rejected.

Our space is valuable, and brevity, as far as possible, should be observed in writing on any topic, and on ONE SIDE of the sheet only.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

—The rain still continues.

—Before purchasing Real Estate or insuring your life, see Rand Bros.

—John Parker's butcher cart came to grief on Fort street this morning by the breaking of the axle. Damage slight.

—A partner, with small capital is wanted to join in dairy business near the city. See ad.

—It is proposed to issue a newspaper at Farwell. The press to be used is that on which the Cariboo Sentinel was printed.

—The Olympian's consignees to-day were: J Wilson, T J Mattock, T Gowan, Cunningham & Co, J Sehl, J Wilson, J Wardel.

—The Northern Pacific on a recent occasion carried fifteen cars of salmon and a car load of Japanese goods from Tacoma to St. Paul.

—The losses sustained by Uren at Van Horne last week, through the burning of his property is estimated at $8,500 but he had considerable insurance thereon.

—The Victoria Theater Co. held a meeting last evening, Mayor Rithet presiding. It was decided to call in the balance, $25,000, of the capital stock.

—Dr. Chipp has rented Sheriff Harris' house, Broad street, where those requiring his professional services will find him in future.

—The Eliza Anderson will leave Victoria for Port Townsend and Seattle hereafter at 7 a. m. Sunday and 6 a. m. on Monday and Friday.

—Several new buildings going up at Belvidere Landing. Messrs. Demers & Sons preparing to erect a fine new dwelling upon their late purchase.

—The Sentinel says: Mr. Speaker Mara received a dispatch intimating that His Excellency the Governor General will reach Kamloops on the 4th of October.

—There will be a grand illumination at the skating rink to-night. The new floor will be in excellent condition, and the band likewise. A race comes off on Monday night.

—Rev. Mr. Horlock of Kamloops, reports a bad state of affairs at Farwell. The liquor traffic is extensive, and scenes that are disgraceful to civilization are to be too frequently witnessed.

—Major Rogers was recently in Kamloops, and reports the track within nine miles of the Narrows when he left. Reports of progress east of the landing are favorable.

—In consequence of the rain the cricket match did not take place to-day. Some of the city cricketers and officers of the fleet had luncheon at the Colonist Hotel and had a few pleasant hours together.

—It is reported that the Geo. W. Elder is to be withdrawn from the Victoria route and the Mexico is to take her place. The former is to be laid up at Martinez.

—Some corn grown in the garden of Rev. Mr. Barss, on Chatham street, seems to have tried to rival in height the trees for which this province is celebrated. Some of the stalks are between eleven and twelve feet high.

—Many of the B. C. Indians who went down the Sound to pick hops are returning home without having gone to work. The wages have been reduced to a point at which even our Indians cannot subsist on the earnings.

—Superintendent Royeraft will be glad to receive any information concerning the relatives of the late William Hamilton, who recently joined H. M. S. Constance and met with a fatal accident a few days ago.

—Letters detained for postage at Victoria post office: J Lintott, City; B F Dillon, Esquimalt, Wm Anthony, New Westminster; A H Harris, Tacoma, W T; Mrs L J Wilson, Nanaimo; Mrs T A Anthony, Laramie City, Wy T.

—Mr. Armytage, of Nicola, reports crops favorable. The market is not as good as could be desired. He also says parties returning from Similkameen mining district report considerable activity in that region. Some, however, are not as lucky as expected.

—John Muir, general traffic manager; J. J. Byrne, general passenger and ticket agent of Oregon Railway and Navigation, and A. D. Charlton, general western passenger agent for the Northern Pacific, are in St. Paul attending the meeting of the Transcontinental association.

—Eugene Mittelstadt, well and favorably known as first and second officer of the steamer Newbern, says the San Francisco Chronicle, has been appointed to the command of that vessel, vice Huntington, transferred to the steamer Mexico.

—Mr. Harper of Nicola, complains that the extortion in the way of getting stock to Victoria compells sales to be made to go to Washington Territory; and this, too, while Washington Territory is now furnishing cattle for the Victoria market. Such is the working of railway monopoly, so says the Kamloops Sentinel.

—A man named John Stewart fell off the Amelia after she had left Salt Spring Island yesterday and was drowned. The unfortunate man was in Victoria on Thursday on business with the railway contractors, and when he is indulged rather freely in liquor. There is not, however, any reason to believe that he was intoxicated at the time of the accident. The body has not been recovered.

—The drop curtain of the new theater will represent a scene from Scott's "Lady of the Lake," and will be the crowning piece of Mr. Porter's work. A local scene was at one time thought of, but the difficulty of selecting the best, and the possibility of local differences and the criticisms of those who might view the original from standpoints different to that taken by the artist, led to the change. An additional drop curtain containing only the words, "God save the Queen," will be provided for use in closing the last scene.

The Epidemic of Crime.

Whence comes this epidemic of suicides and murders? Recent discussions have named several causes. Hon. C.H. Pierce, of Indiana, charges it to infidel teaching—holding that hopelessness of a future state cripples fortitude for bearing life's ills. Another declares suffering from the universal business depression the cause. A third writer attributes it to increasing insanity, a physician thinks much of the tendency is inherited, while temperance advocates lay the responsibility upon strong drink.

Free-thinkers have committed suicide, but so have orthodox churchmen. Financial straits have beset many, but the wealthy have also taken their life.

Insanity and dissipation have preceded suicides and family murders.

One feature common to almost every such crime challenges attention. Well nigh every report of suicide and family murder mentions the perpetrator as having "for some time been subject to melancholy." Whence comes this? All recognized medical authorities tell us that the fire which consumes the brain is always kindled by derangements of digestion; that good digestion is impossible without pure blood, and pure blood is never known when the liver and kidneys are out of order. Under such circumstances a preventive should be sought, and for this Warner's safe cure is sovereign—a fact conceded by the best authorities in the land, and it is especially commended by the celebrated Dr. Dio Lewis.—Rochester Democrat.

The Rock Spring Trouble.

Dr. McCartee, formerly an official in the Chinese diplomatic service, speaking concerning the diplomatic aspect of the attack upon the Chinese in Wyoming, says he thinks it may be a subject of correspondence between the Chinese Foreign office and the state department here, but he does not think China is likely to take any vigorous action in the matter, principally because the Chinese government is opposed to the emigration of its subjects. Gen. Rosecrans said there could be no reason for believing that the massacre of Chinamen by miners in Wyoming Territory could lead to serious trouble on the Pacific coast. Hugh Mahan, a prominent California campaign speaker and politician, now here, says the unemployed laborers of California, who attribute their lack of employment to the presence of Chinamen, need only the slightest excitement to make an attack on the Chinese settlements.

The Trophy.

The Queen's cup, or the America's cup, as it is sometimes called, for which the Genesta and Puritan are contending, is of solid silver, ewer-shaped and elaborately ornamented. It stands full two feet high and weighs at least 100 ounces. Around its broadest part are medallions, variously inscribed. The first is as follows: "One-Hundred-Guinea Cup, won August 22, 1851, at Cowes, England, by yacht America, at the Royal Yacht Squadron regatta, open to all nations, beating"—and then follow the names of all the vessels which started in the race of 1851. On the next medallion is engraved: "Schooner America, 170 tons, Commodore John C. Stevens; built by George Steers, New York, 1851." On the other spaces are inscriptions recording the results of the races with the schooners Cambria, Livonia and Countess of Dufferin and the sloop Atalanta.

Personal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Rev. Moses A. Hopkins, of Franklinton, N.C., appointed Minister to Liberia, was born a slave in Montgomery county, and after gaining his freedom pursued a course of study and was graduated at Lincoln University, Pennsylvania, class of 1874, and also graduated at Auburn, New York, Presbyterian Theological Seminary. In addition to his services as Presbyterian clergyman, he has been engaged in educational pursuits, and was Principal of the State Colored Normal School at Franklinton, N. C. He was highly recommended for the position by the Governor and other officials of North Carolina, and by other men of prominence, including a good many clergymen and representative colored men of the country.

St. James' Church Bazaar.

A bazaar, in connection with the above church, will be held in Philharmonic Hall on Wednesday and Thursday next. The bazaar will open at 3 p. m. on Wednesday. By permission of Admiral Seymour the excellent band of H. M. S. Triumph will be in attendance. There will be a museum of antiquities, conjuring tricks, &c. The admission will be only 25 cents, and a large attendance is certain to be present.

The Cold Weather.

The season of the year is approaching rapidly, if not already here, when a fire in the parlor grate in the morning and evening "feels good," and when housekeepers are reminded that a winter's supply of coal has to be provided. Messrs. Hall & Goepel, agents for the Wellington coal, are prepared to receive orders and deliver free of charge to any part of the city.

—Mr. Uriah Nelson has disposed of his store at Eagle Pass to Mr. Fletcher.

—Dr. C. E. Comstock intends settling in Kamloops.

—Mr. T. Harper has disposed of 1000 calves to Mr. McCoy, of W. T.

—Hon. Mr. Justice Walkem will hold court at Richfield, Cariboo, on Monday next.

The issue of standard silver dollars from the mints during the week ended August 31, was $547,488. The issue for the corresponding period of last year was $282,995.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Ward and the Electric Light.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR,—I observe in your issue of this evening an anonymous communication in which my conduct as chairman of the Finance Committee is brought into question.

Your correspondent states that the public would like to known upon what ground I have refused to sign a cheque in part payment of the electric light purchase. The fact is, this electric light question has been the most troublesome one before the Council since their election to office; and when before my constituents I promised that the matter of street lighting should receive my earnest attention, and, although unaware of the arrangements then existing between the so-called Electric Light Company and the Corporation, I should make it my duty to investigate; and if those arrangements were in my opinion perfectly fair and straightforward, however much I disapproved of the wretched illuminating power furnished the city, I should try to make the best of a bad bargain entered into by a previous Council, and do my best toward improving the lighting system of the future. After my election to the Council I spent many hours in investigating the history of the electric light arrangements with the corporation, and could arrive at no other conclusion than:

1. That as entirely one sided agreement (favorable to the owner of the plant and material of the electric light) with the corporation, had been entered into.

2. That the contract, however, had been repeatedly broken by the "Company," and although the committee on Electric Light and Street Lighting, had, in the late Council (and subsequently by the present Council) recommended that the contractors should be notified that the agreement would be cancelled, unless the conditions of it were properly carried out, yet the "solid six" (reduced to five in the present Council) ignored those recommendations, at the very time when, in my opinion they should have taken the opportunity of ridding the city of a lot of bogus plant and material, which was being pressed upon the corporation to purchase.

It was well known, too, that the plant and material would never stand the wear and tear of anything like eight years, as set forth in the contract, and every possible effort was therefore strained in order to close a purchase of the concern, and thus annul a contract which could never have been carried out.

The discreditable means adopted to jockey this business through, are, I trust now generally well known, and it is a matter of record that so little confidence was felt by the contractor as to his ability to force the late council to purchase, that no less than seven different legal opinions were procured; four by Mr. E. C. Baker, M. P., one by Mr. McMicking (the alleged contractor) and two through the influence of an ex-councillor, Mr. J. Wrigleworth; the latter opinions having been obtained for the "contractor" from the legal advisers of the corporation.

This and other interesting matters relative to electric light can be found in the printed report of the committee appointed by the mayor. I therefore persistently opposed either leasing or purchasing, but the "solid five" were one too many for the remaining four, and in the frequent discussions of this subject it has been kindly suggested, on more than one occasion, by an ardent supporter of the electric light, that "Councillor Ward has been suffering with electric light on the brain," and that his opposition emanated from a connection with the Gas Company, an insinuation utterly devoid of foundation, as I have no interest, directly or indirectly, with that company. The "solid five," however, voted to purchase the "rattle traps" (it has been suggested by a competent authority that the best thing to do with them is to "chuck" them in the street) and the "splendid bargain" acquired by the city was promised to effect a saving of I don't know how many hundred dollars per month, whereas the Council has already been called upon to expend several hundred dollars for incidentals, and a recommendation is now before it to expend several hundred dollars further, on new belting, new governor, and new everything in fact. But having decided to purchase, the next step was to provide for payment, and the "solid five" concluded to pay for it out of THE CURRENT YEAR'S REVENUE, which would of course absorb a very large proportion of it. I repeatedly challenged the supporters of such a measure to give some sensible reason for seeking to deprive the city of such a large sum of money, which is so urgently needed for repairs to streets, roads, sidewalks, sewerage and other important works. The only reason I could withdraw was that "it was a very fine investment for the city." It is not perhaps generally known, that no Municipal Council has the power to make an EXTRAORDINARY expenditure out of this current year's revenue. If, therefore, the line cannot be drawn here, I should like to know what an extraordinary expenditure really is. Perhaps the course I have pursued in refusing to "take a hand" in this matter, is wrong, but I shall certainly not act on the suggestion of your correspondent and show the "white feather," unless it is the wish of my constituents who elected me, that I should resign. In which case I should not hesitate to comply with their request. Although your correspondent subscribes himself "A Ward Politician," it is of course possible that he does not possess the qualifications of a ratepayer, and the "public" (whose champion he assumes to be) might consider that I have "made myself ridiculous" in noticing an anonymous communication at such length. I trust, therefore, that if he has anything further to state, he will do so over his own name; and as I have no time to take part in a newspaper controversy I would suggest that he attend the public Council meetings on Wednesday evenings, when he can nearly always rely on learning something about this wonderful electric light.

Yours truly,
ROBT. WARD,
Councillor James Bay Ward.

Irresponsible Government.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

SIR:—A writer in this morning's Standard, calling himself "Anti-Electric Light," in reply to my communication of yesterday, begs the whole question. I did not charge Mr. Ward with inconsistency on the electric light question, nor did I suggest that he resign his seat in the Council. The point I endeavored to make was this—that with the majority of the Council in favor of a certain course, he should, as chairman of the Finance Committee, either carry out the will of that majority or resign his position as chairman. I did not enter into the question of the expediency or propriety of purchasing the electric light. That has been accomplished—the light is now the property of the city—and no amount of objections, and no refusals to sign checks, can break the binding agreement entered into. Mr. Ward fought against the purchase "tooth and nail," and, I am free to confess, with considerable reason. If he now finds himself as chairman of the Finance Committee, in a doubtful position, and his ideas of what is right and consistent forbid him from being a party, even in the remotest degree and under protest, to the payment of an installment of the purchase money, his duty is very clear. He should step down and out. In that position, and under such circumstances, the theory and practice of responsible government fully apply; and to those who know Mr. Ward intimately, as I do, it seems most extraordinary that he should not so understand it. I am not opposed to Mr. Ward. I know him to be the most independent man in the Council, as he is one of the cleverest, and I do not wish to see him make such an egregious blunder, and take a position that is untenable, because it is a usurpation of the legal and moral right of the majority to rule.

A WARD POLITICIAN.

POLICE COURT.

(Before Edwin Johnson, Esq., S. M.)

A drunk was disposed of with the usual fine.

Mabel Davenport, creating a disturbance on the street by screaming and swearing; fined $25 or one month.

C. J. Morrison, fighting on the sidewalk on Yates street. Officer Walker, who arrested prisoner, proved that he was intoxicated at the time and was fighting at the door of the Pritchard House with another man who was inside. Fined $5.

George Gardner, supplying an Indian with liquor; fined $50 and $1 costs or two months.

James Smith, robbing Magnus Sandborn on the street. Sandborn, who is a Swede, was sworn and said: Have been working on the C. P. R. and came down to the city a few days ago, stopping at the Vancouver House. Knew the prisoner very well. On Thursday night, between twelve and one o'clock, at the corner of the street, he drew a revolver and holding it at the witness' breast ordered him to throw up his hands. When witness complied, prisoner went through his pockets and took $45 and some small change. First met prisoner at Yale on the way down to Victoria; he beat his passage on the boat to New Westminster and had to work his passage from that city to this. Witness admitted that he was "ginned up" at the time.

Chas. H. Bowden, night bar-tender at the Vancouver House: First saw Sanborn on Thursday night treating the boys at the Vancouver House bar; had changed twenty dollars for him. Prisoner and complainant were quarrelling, the latter wanted to fight on account of something that had occurred between them at Eagle Pass. Prisoner said to witness that he had only drawn a revolver on complainant to scare him. Smith gave witness the revolver to keep for him, and in about half an hour, when he was going out again, got it back.

To the Court—I noticed once when Sandborn came in the front door that the prisoner rushed out by a side one.

Prisoner was remanded to Tuesday next.

Frank Rosengreen, charged with stealing a watch and chain, valued at $25, and $90 in bank bills and coin, from the person of one J. Johnson. Supt. Bloomfield explained that the complainant and prisoner had been around together. Some where on Yates street the prisoner had robbed Johnson and left him.

Remanded till Tuesday next.

MARINE NOTES.

The San Francisco Chronicle has great difficulty in determining the future movements of the Elder and Mexico. This is the latest statement: It has been decided to haul the Mexico out for business. She will take the place of the Elder on the Victoria route, the latter going on the Portland freight route to transport Oregon wheat to this port. Capt. Huntington will take the Mexico, his place on the Newbern being filled by Capt. Mittelstadt, late chief officer.

Music Lessons.

A young lady who has had the advantage of receiving instruction in music from Professor Oliver King, (Pianist to Princess Louise) is desirous of obtaining a limited number of music pupils, and will give lessons at her residence, or if desired at their own homes. For particulars enquire at M. W. Waitt's music store.
